What are cookies?

Cookies are small pieces of data stored on your browser, computer, or other device when you visit websites, including our website ("our Website"). Cookies typically contain anonymous information accessible by the website that set them, on subsequent visits to that website, or sometimes when visiting other websites.

Please note that we may also collect information about your usage of our Website from data contained in "log files". Log files are distinct from cookies; they do not contain any personal data and are not used to identify your personal use of our Website. When you request any web page from our Website, web servers automatically obtain your domain name and Internet Protocol ("IP") address, but they do not reveal any personal information about you, and that data is only used to examine Website traffic in aggregate, to investigate abuse of our Website and its users, and/or to cooperate with law enforcement. Such data is not shared with third parties, except in aggregate.

How do we use cookies?

• We use cookies to store the following data:

- How you use our Website
- Identifiers such as your device and location
- Your preferences for our Website and services Cookies cannot harm your computer or other device.

What cookies do we use?

There are four different types of cookies, which we explain below:

- Necessary cookies: These are required for the operation of our Website, and they do not gather information about you that could be used for marketing or remembering your internet browsing history.
- Analytical/performance cookies: These allow us to collect information about how you use our Website, such as how you navigate our Website and if you encounter any errors. These cookies do not collect personal data. The information collected is anonymous and is only used to help us improve the functionality of our Website, understand the general interests of our users, and measure the effectiveness of our advertising. Some of the performance cookies we use are issued as part of services provided by third parties, such as Google Analytics.

- Functionality cookies: These are used to provide services or recognize you when you return to our Website. They enable us to personalize our content for you, greet you by name, remember your preferences, and enhance your visit.
- Targeting cookies: These record your visit to a specific website, the pages you have visited, and the links you have followed. They are associated with services provided by third parties, such as "Like" and "Share" buttons, in exchange for recognizing that you have visited the relevant website. The third party may subsequently use information about your visit to target advertising to you on other websites and present you with advertisements that may interest you.

How do I manage my cookie settings?

Please note that configuring your computer and/or mobile browser to reject "necessary," "performance," or "functional" cookies may significantly affect your experience on our Website, and some parts of Our website may not function at all.

All browsers provide tools that allow you to control how you handle cookies: accept, reject, or delete them. These settings are usually accessed via the "settings," "preferences," or "options" menu of the browser you are using, but you can also look for a "help" function or contact the browser provider.
